

Your ICP Is Not a Persona

And the difference is costing you territories.

THE CONFUSION

One is a person. One is a company.

A persona describes Ahmed, forty six, Technical Procurement Manager. An ICP describes water treatment contractors, fifty to five hundred people, GCC, project driven revenue.

— SCRIPT VS MAP

Talking well to the wrong people

The persona shapes your opening line. The ICP tells you which two hundred companies out of eight thousand are worth calling at all.

— WHERE IT LEAKS

Three expensive mistakes

- Markets picked on trade show gut feel
- Distributors signed on enthusiasm
- Intelligence with no standard to score it against

THE FIX

Four profiles, not one

- ICP: who to sell to
- Value Prop: why they buy
- IOP: when they buy
- IRP: who is worth keeping

— HOW LONG

Six questions, five minutes

Your best customers. The problem you solve. What makes them look. Who is a bad fit. Why they choose you. What keeps them loyal.

— THEN THE LOOP

Watch the market for it

Discovery reads the ICP. Continuous Intelligence reads the IOP triggers and verifies every signal across two independent sources. Assessment scores against all four.

Has your team ever written it down?

Build your ideal profile in six questions and watch the market for it.
